IMPORTANT MEASURES

Several Are Presented in the House and Senate-Mr. McIlwains Would Have Uniformity of Statutes in the Several States-Gossip.

The Legislature did a fairly good day's work yesterday. Some interesting measares were passed in both houses and others of public moment were offered and referred. The Senate, by a vote of 32 to t, passed the bill offered by Mr. Halsey, of Lynchburg, authorizing the placing of a statue of General R. E. Lee in the Statuary Hall of the National Capitol, Messrs. Gold and Opie alone voting in the negative. Both these Senators spoke strongly against the bill and it was eloquently advocated by Messrs. Halsey, Sears, Tyler and others.

The bill providing for the payment of pertain contingent expenses was also passed, and several bills were offered and referred. One of these was by Mr. McIlwaine providing for the appointment of a commission to encourage the uniformity of statutes by the several States of the Union, and another was by Mr.
Watkins to allow the Governor to resist certain court fines.
There were a number of petitions in favor of the Mann Ilquor bill, and they were referred.

The general tax bill being the special worder in the House was postponed and the calendar cleared of uncontested matter. On motion of Mr. Southall, the House agreed to an adjournment until 10 b'clock on Monday, in order to give more jume for the Campbell-Crawford investigation to day.

The Committee on Counties, Cities and Towns reported a bill authorizing the founty of Campbell to erect a Confederate monument on its public square, and Jose inhabitants to issue bonds to settle outstanding oblagations.

There were several bills offered, but they were local in their nature for the most part. Mr. Bowman presented one pontinuing the offices of cierk and auditor for the city of Roancke, and another was by Mr. Stafford, authorizing the erection of a Confederate monument at Pearisburg.

Among the bills of interest which were Among the bills of interest which were passed by the House were those chartering the Alumni Association of the University of Virginia; amending the Code in relation to limited partnerships, and to provide for the prosecution of criminal cases removed from the State to the Federal courts under section 643 of the United States Statutes.

The Senate will meet at noon to-day,

The Senate.

The Halsey bill to provide for the placing of a statue of General Robert E. Lee in the Statuary Hall in the Capitol at Washington, came up at the spe-cial order in the Senate yesterday. Mr. Gold, a Confederate Veteran, was

Mr. Gold, a Confederate Veteran, was the first speaker. He made a strong plea for the passage of his resolution and in opposition to the Halsey bill. Mr. Gold grew really eloquent in his tribute to Lee and in his pleadings with the Senators not to place the statue of Lee where it was not wanted.

Mr. Tyler, the son of a former President of the United States, eloquently advocated the Halsey bill. The Churles City Senator is one of the strongest speakers in the body. He has the good fortune to possess a voice, which, while not musical, always attracts attention, and his delivery is graceful. Mr. Tyler was roundly applauded.

MR. TYLER'S SPEECH.

He spoke as follows:

MR. TYLER'S SPEECH.

He spoke as follows:

"When this bill was first presented I was doubtful whether the time was opportune for action to be taken by the General Assembly of Virginia looking to the placing of a statute of Virginia's noblest son in the National Capitol.

"Unlike others, I was not so sanguine as to believe that the dominant section of this republic was as yet magnanimous enough to accept the yerdict of history enough to accept the verdict of history and admit that America's highest ideal of military greatness, of civic worth and human excellence, found expression in the life and character of Robert Ed-

I felt, too, that action at this time "I felt, too, that action at this time might be premature, if Virginia, in pre-senting the statue of her hero, relied for its acceptance on the graciousness of her former foes, and I was unwilling to risk the chance of a currish refusal. for its acceptance on the graciousness of her former foes, and I was unwilling to risk the chance of a currish refusal.

"I doubted, also, whether the Federal statute inviting the States of the Union to place statues of those they deemed their greatest citizens in the Halls of the Capitol might not be construed as restricting this right to the Northern States. But since then I have been assured that there can be no question of Virginia's right, her legal right, to be represented in the Nation's Wahhalla; that she can exerces her own choice of the many jewels that glisten in her coronet, and that thus, suing for no favor, caring not for the vindictive protests and criticisms of little souls, but standing on her own right as a sovereign State of this republic, Virginia is at full liberty to place by the side of George Washington, the founder of the American system of self-government, the later but not less glorious defender of constitutional freedom, Robert Lee.

"And so for this reason, and no other, I shall support this bill. Its passage will, if it should have no other result, again show to the world the undying esteem and veneration with which we cherish the memory of our great commander, and that we only forestall for new brief years the opinion of his greatness in which all the peoples of the earth will hold him.

"And let it be understood that no marble effigy in a memorial hall will add anything to his honor, or make more secure the position Lee will occupy in future history. His name will endure when those of his opponents will be forgot. Hannibal, the the leader of a defeated people, shines among the immortals, while his Roman conquerors.

to his honor!
"The statue of Lee in the Capitol will be an honor to the Republic, not to thim, and an object lesson from which the coming generations shall draw their highest inspiration!"

MR. OPIE OPPOSES.

Mr. Ople, a veteran of the Confederate service, an orator and a debator equal to any fellow member of the Senate. was eloquent and a little bit fiery in his opposition to the Halsey bill. Mr. Ople called the attention of the Senate to the fact that the resolution inviting each State to place two statues in Statuary Hall was passed by Congress in 1884 in the darkest days of the Civil War. He wanted to know who brought the message to Virginia that this State was asked to contribute. Straightening himself up and almost tip-teeing, Mr. Opic said the message was brought to us by Phil Sheridan, who at the head of 30,00 soldiers was marching through the State destroying property and causing suffering to women and children, Unbuttoning the second button of his frock coat, Mr. Opic wanted to know who carried the message to the people of Georgia. Mr. Opie was not willing to force Lee's statue where it was not wanted. He did not wish to place it where it would be despised by the majority of the people of a section of the country whose national hymn was "John Brown's body lies moulding in the grave as we go marching on."

It was not to be expected, argued Mr. Opie, that the people of the North would like Lee, who marched through Maryland and Pennsylvania, leaving the fields strewn with the dead bodies of Federal soldiers.

Mr. Die sald he knew that the best element of the North was not opposed to what it is purposed by this bill to do, but the dominant party there is opposed to it and is opposed to all the best interests of the South.

Mr. Opie sald the Southern people are as true to the Federal Government as any people in the government, but the South would have to remain solid so long as the North is solid. The speaker got in several sharp raps at Roosevelt and his policy toward the South. In closing Mr. Ople predicted that the time would Opic predicted that the time would

Mr. Opie thought the old soldiers were as far as he had been able to learn opposed to placing Lee's statue in Statuary Hall,

MR. SEARS FAVORS IT.

Mr. Sears, the eloquent young Senator from Mathews, made a splendid address in favor of the bill, and again proved himself able to stand up well under cross-fire of Senators opposed to him.

Mr. Halsey made a brief speech, in which he again eloquently advocated the passage of the measure.

Mr. Mcliwaine said he would vote for the bill with some misgivings. He thought that it was unfortunate that the matter had been brought up at this time but as the measure had to be voted upon he would support it for fear that if he did not do so his vote against it would be misunderstood.

be decided either by the Special Jumping Committee or the judges of the contest."

Those who attended the seris of contests similar to the above several seasons ago will remember what delightful social events they proved to be, and what a large representation of Richmond society was present.

The jumps will be placed in full view of the club-house, and after the contest light refreshments will be served.

The following have already consented to nominate horses;

Messrs, F. W. Christian, Joseph E. Willard, Harry Beattle, Blanchard Forbes, R. H. Harwood, F. E. Guptill, J. D. Matthews, Thomas Atkinson, Elmore Hotchkiss, Allen Potts, W. C. Saunders, Miss Claudia Palmer, Miss Louise Seden and others.

The attractiveness of the club has been much added to recently by an announcement from the House Committee that light lunch will be served a-la-carte daily, and that a plane has been placed in the club's reception room.

KOCIAN AND HIS VIOLIN

HE LOVES HIS INSTRUMENT

Evening.

Rocian, the great Bohemian violinist, who is to give a concert at the Academy in this city to-night, is at the Jefferson. He spent the day yesterday in getting photographs of different places of interest about the city and in playing. He received many calls from musical people and others interested in musical affairs. When he was seen in his apartments and asked about his romance with the daughter of the wealthy William Waldorf Astor, he shock his heavy locks and twanged the strings of his violin. "I do not like to talk," he said, shy-

"That is," he added, as he pulled at his sprouting moustache, "I don't like to talk about Miss Astor.

"Your manager is the authority for "Your manager is the authority for the statement that you know Miss Astor; that she gave you the violin which you are using on this tour.

Kocian tossed back his long locks of straight hair.

He slowly nodded his head and lisped a "yes."

Then the little violinist blushed violently.

lently.
"Miss Astor gave you the violin?"
"Yes," answered Kocian, "she "Miss Astor gave you the violin?"
"Yes," answered Kocian, "she did; and, ch, ch, I love it—this beautiful violin. I would not part with it for all the world. Ah, I talk, my violin talks—we tell our secrets to each other. I tell my joys and my sorrows to my violin, and it makes me happy.

Spindler, who is the accompanist for Kocian, stood by und drank in the words of the young Bohenian.
"Yes, yes, that is true," he said.
"How did she happen to give you the violin?"
